Particularly distinctive villa designed by a well-known Turin architect, located at Via Vela 22, in the prestigious Crocetta district of Turin. The building has a strong architectural presence and is made of iron and glass. The front volume is characterised by a barrel-vaulted glazed structure that serves as a bioclimatic conservatory.

Featuring contemporary finishes, the villa has wooden floors and is particularly bright, as it is almost entirely made up of glass walls separating the different spaces. The living area comprises an entrance hall, living room, large eat-in kitchen and bioclimatic conservatory used as a living and dining area.

The sleeping area includes four bedrooms, each with a small terrace, and three bathrooms. The property is completed by a landscaped garden with swimming pool.
